TRAINING IN DATA LITERACY FOR CITY STAFF

Data dashboards are only as good as the quality of the data and the utility of the data to people who need to use it for decision making.

This often requires training in data literacy and management, as well as process to ensure that data is accurate. While this is a more general issue, it is particularly relevant to early childhood because a lot of service provision is done informally and by providers who may not have strong administrative capacities.

Moreover, since direct measures of child outcomes may not be available, there is a need to determine what proxy data can be used for effective decision-making.
